Albany police nab Village rape suspect

By CARL ZABLOTNY
ALBANY — Albany police have arrested a Pittsburg man on two counts of rape in connection with two attacks at University Village last month.
Floyd Jones, 43, was arrested early Friday morning by Capt. Mel Boyd, Sgt. Archie Stirling, and Detective Richard Kempe after a felony arrest warrant charging numerous counts was issued by Judge Carol Brosnahan of the Berkeley-Albany Municipal Court. A search warrant was also signed for physical as well as material evidence.

Jones was arrested by local police in cooperation with Pittsburg officers and charged with two counts of rape, oral copulation, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon along with other offenses. Brosnahan set bail at $250,000 and Jones remains in custody.
Jones was arrested by Albany police in 1977 for attempted rape and oral copulation in the UC-Village and was convicted and sent to state prison. He was released in 1981.
Police Chief James Simmons had said he was confident his men would

Gateview: back to court again

ALBANY — The Gateview condominiums were back in court last week as new reports surfaced of more cracks in the condominium's garage.
Gary Dubin, a lawyer representing Gateview residents who filed a $500 million suit alleging the Albany high-rise was badly built, told Superior Court Judge Donald McCullum a "gaping hole" had developed in the garage ceiling.
McCullum has been overseeing repairs on the condominium complex.
"We are not satisfied by what has been done," Dubin said. "There are other sections of the garage that are near collapse."
The judge had previously approved plans to help support the garage with timber cribbing.

According to Dubin, on May 18 a large chunk of the garage ceiling fell. The hole was estimated at about six inches wide and eight feet long.
"We've always feared no one responds until someone gets hurt," Dubin said.
The suit, filed on behalf of Gateview residents Lee Johnson and Donald Scott, alleged the condominium was a dangerous structure near collapse unless immediate steps were taken to shore up the structure, especially the main parking garage.
McCullum appointed a receiver to take a look at the situation, and the receiver suggested the cribbing be an initial stop-gap measure.

More than 20 million Americans — nearly 10 percent of all children and adults in the United States — have speech, hearing or language impairments which severely effect their abilities to communicate.
For more than half a century, May has been observed as national Better Hearing and Speech Month. The national campaign to highlight speech, language and hearing disabilities and give recognition to the professionals

Caring for Kensington's 'latch key' children

Will new after-school project help?

By MARTI KELLER
KENSINGTON — In a city they would be called latch key children. They would be hanging out on the schoolyard or in the streets or at the candy store until dark, when they would go home to dusky, empty apartments.
In a hillside suburb like Kensington, they are harder to see. On a rainy winter afternoon, they can be found at the county library: joking, and roughhousing in the stacks until they are shushed by patient librarians who are frequently asked to check for missing kids while juggling stacks of books.
Now that the weather is warmer, they can play around the Youth Hut Annex under the supervision of a paid recreation leader until 4 p.m. Or they can take one of the few classes offered through the Kensington Recreation program: ballet, creative movement, or an occasional puppetry or nature class.
There are weekly Cub Scouts and Brownies meeting, reachable on foot after school, but if these children of working parents in a mostly affluent bedroom community want to take a science or music class, do arts and crafts, perform in a children's theater production - their parents must make elaborate and often unwieldy carpooling arrangements, or do without.

Ron and Davida Egherman have lived in Kensington for six years. Part of that time they have both worked: he as assistant director for administration of the University Art Museum, she as a reading specialist teacher and consultant. Recently, Davida has been a 30-hour employee and has put in time volunteering at Kensington Elementary School and chaperoning their two children Dara, 8, and Rachel, 5, to a round of afternoon enrichment programs.
Currently their daughters need after school care or activities three days a week.
"Earlier this year, when we first heard about the proposed shortening of the school day for next fall, Davida worked to fight that," Egherman said.
She was concerned not only about the reduction of teaching, but also about the impact on her own and other children of working parents. The 40 minutes sliced off the school

Judge won't halt alien voter probe

By ELIZABETH FERNANDEZ
An attempt by minority and Hispanic groups to halt an investigation into bilingual voters was defeated in court when a federal judge in San Francisco ruled he had no authority to interfere in the federal probe.
U.S. District Court Judge Spencer Williams denied an appeal May 24 for an injunction to end an investigation of Bay Area residents who requested bilingual voting material when they registered to vote.
The court action means the investigation by U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello will continue against 25 residents in each of nine San Francisco counties. Eleven West County residents, eight from Richmond, are included in the investigation.

The names of the Contra Costa residents were randomly selected by District Attorney William O'Malley and submitted to Russoniello April 23.
Russoniello will compare their names with lists of naturalized citizens. Those who are not naturalized, and therefore not entitled to vote, could be investigated for possible voting fraud, a felony.
The investigation has been denounced by the American Civil Liberties Union, minority groups, and public officials who said it was discriminatory because it involved only Chinese and Spanish-speaking voters working with the communicatively disabled is coordinated by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA), the national scientific and professional society of more than 33,000 speech-language pathologists and audiologists concerned with the causes and effects of disturbances in human communication.

Communicatively disabled

Studies indicate that more people suffer from speech, language and hearing impairments than from heart disease, paralysis, epilepsy, blindness, cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, and multiple sclerosis combined. Most people with communicative disorders can be helped. Rehabilitation for these impairments includes: medical and surgical treatments, amplification, and speech and language therapy.

Speech-language pathologists and audiologists are the professionals who work with individuals with speech, language or hearing impairments in an effort to restore or improve their ability to assume a meaningful and productive place in society. Types of communicative disorders include hearing loss, misarticulation, delayed language development, stuttering, voice disorder and aphasia.

The problems faced by the hearing handicapped are self-evident. They miss important parts of conversations, or worse yet, they "mishear" comments. Hearing disorders make even more difficult such common activities as driving the car or watching a favorite television program. Early diagnosis and treatment of hearing problems may well prevent permanent, irreparable damage. A hearing test is quick and painless. It supplies the physician with valuable information for treating hearing problems. For those persons who have already been diagnosed as having a hearing problem which is not reversible, special instruction in speech reading and the use of the hearing aid are available.

The young child who says "wain" for rain or "tup" for cup is said to misarticulate. This simply means that there are some sounds which are not being said correctly. Children acquire speech sounds in a particular developmental order. When that development is delayed the frustration of not being understood, constant correction by adults and harassment by peers can harm a young child's self esteem. However such speech problems are easily treated with "play" or formal sessions supported by home programs.

The child who fails to utilize speech by 2 1/2 to 3 years is in need of professional help. Often the lack of intelligible speech or the failure to put words together is the first clue a parent has that the child is not developing normally. Parents should pay close attention to speech, language and hearing development in their children. The time lost in the child's learning process because of communication disorders not diagnosed and treated, is irretrievable. Much can be achieved through therapy sessions, special education pre-schools and parent education.

The individual who stutters is often the brunt of jokes and gags, embarrassed and hesitant to speak out in meetings or in the classroom, and frustrated by the inability to share ideas with others. An understanding speech pathologist can not only help improve speech patterns but can restore dignity and the feeling of being a worthwhile individual.

Loss of a quality voice can thwart self-expression and disrupt jobs. When a person's voice is habitually harsh, rough, hoarse, or breathy or when laryngitis occurs, a medical check-up is warranted. Such symptoms may indicate poor vocal habits and/or signal the onset of a physical ailment or disease and should not be ignored. After appropriate medical treatment, therapy to retrain the voice restores normal function.

One of the most devastating of all communication disorders is aphasia. This is the disruption in speech, reading and writing which results from stroke or other brain trauma. The aphasic can be helped, and can learn to communicate again. An integral part of this language program is family counseling. Stroke does not only happen to an individual but has far-reaching effects upon friends and family.

It is important to remember that early diagnosis and treatment of speech, language and hearing problems is essential to a good prognosis.

If you, or a person you care about, suffers from a communication disorder or if you are interested in further information about speech, language and hearing services, please contact National Association for Hearing and Speech Action, a consumer affiliate of ASHA. FUN AFTER SCHOOL — Chris Guptill (right), playground director at the Kensington Youth Hut Annex, plays carroms with (from left) Dejon Hughes, Warren Donian and Phillip Donian. The Youth Hut, operated by the Kensington Recreation Center, offers some of the few organized activities for young people in town.

The latch key children

day would mean "more time the kids are out on the street with not a lot to do that's accessible without a car," he observed.

"We began thinking if there was a program connected with the school it would be a safer and easier alternative to having kids taking an individual class here or there. The regular school program could be more closely integrated with the after-school enrichment. All those creative, non-essential things they won't be able to get to could happen on the same site," Eggherman said.

Eggherman took it upon himself to phone around Kensington, assembling a small group of parents who were concerned about the possibility of a shorter school day and about the lack of ongoing recreation activities, particularly for children six years and older.

"As a male parent, I feel it is important for me to take responsibility for working on behalf of my children in the community," he believes. "I don't feel the burden should always be on non-working, mostly female parents."

He is informal chair of the ad hoc committee which has met a few times in the past couple of months to come up with an After School Enrichment Program (ASEP) for elementary school age children in Kensington. As proposed, the ASEP will be a five-day-a-week program beginning after school and ending around 6 p.m. It will be constructed around a series of regular one to one and a half hour classes, including arts and crafts, sports, music, theater arts, and computers. There will be a certain amount of free time for children who require it, since, as Eggherman pointed out, a string of classes would make for a "long, structured day."

"We plan to start with a small pilot program of about 50 children (there are 300 children enrolled at the elementary school and others who attend private schools nearby) which can easily be adjusted with experience and expanded according to need," Eggherman explained. Classes will be taught by trained adults, with parent participation encouraged.

The Kensington Community Council (KCC) and the Kensington Recreation Department agreed at the May meeting to sponsor the After School Enrichment Program, starting in September. They will provide a coordinator to develop the program and supervise the paid and volunteer staff. The KCC will rent space at Kensington and perhaps the Jefferson School just down the hill (formerly a county TMR school, now rented to a private school), if the activities meet with the approval of the Richmond Unified School District. Other classes may meet in the Youth Hut Annex.

Groups renting rooms in an existing public school building must be using the space for programs compatible with the regular use. For example, the school's computer room could be used for a computer course taught by an experienced teacher, or a home economics room could be used for a cooking class.

The parents on the enrichment committee have gained the support of Kensington School District as well. He plans to begin studying the need for an after-school enrichment program; the types of activities would like; how much it would cost to pay; and whether it would help with money or time.

The survey will also be in the June issue of the "Outlook," a monthly newsletter free to all residents. Eggherman hopes to complete surveys by the end of the summer.

Over the summer, committee members, in conjunction with the KCC, will develop a program — if the response is with content, hours, and to the requirements of the community.

"If the survey shows a program is needed, the make at least a six-month commitment to the parents who children," Eggherman said. He also plans to recruit a coordinator for the KCC, the committee's first step in becoming self-supporting.

The ASEP is looking for volunteers willing to give seed money, program, and has already received some pledges. Shortly after the survey, a job description for a coordinator experienced with administration programs and administrative and budgeting abilities.

Schools ponder improvement for '83

Some are unhappy about plans for AHS

By TERRY TOCZYNSKI

ALBANY — The Albany School Board Tuesday debated three and a half late-night hours to discussion of next year's improvement plans for four schools.

The plan for Vista School was unconditionally approved. Cornell, Marin and Albany High school site will discuss modifications recommended by independent members and resubmit their plans, along with requests, at the June 8 meeting.

That night the board will decide whether to approve the plans and authorize their submission to the State Department of Education. The board has announced its intent to approve all three plans, and has asked the Albany and Marin site councils for only a few minor changes.

Some board members were unhappy with sub-portions of the high school improvement plan. The School site council representatives said that improvements for next year will center on the arts. The plan is to concentrate on parent education, development and science education. The Marin site council said its improvement plan emphasizes language arts and critical thinking.

In a brief, heated discussion broke out over the high school plan after board member Peggy Thomsen read a letter detailing her dissatisfaction with the plan.

Board president Gerald Brunetti added his dissent of other aspects of the proposal.

There was no board consensus on the modifications. The plan could be made in the plan before it can be submitted to the state with a request for funding.

Thomsen's major complaints were based on her view of the plan called for spending a disproportionate amount of the requested funding on salaries rather than on student services. Thomsen referred to the portion of the plan that would go to pay Carol Jacobson, the improvement plan coordinator, and career center director Ruth Waxman.

Brunetti was most concerned about what he said he saw as a lack of cohesiveness in the plan, citing for example the career education program. He said he felt that career education should run through the entire curriculum so students are reached, rather than being isolated in a center as it is now.

Assistant high school principal Bruce Jones defended the improvement proposal, saying that the state department has praised Albany's plan and has adopted it as a model for other schools in the state.

He said that apparently the state has been quite satisfied with the plan for the past three years.

Thomsen's right," he asked, "you or the state?"

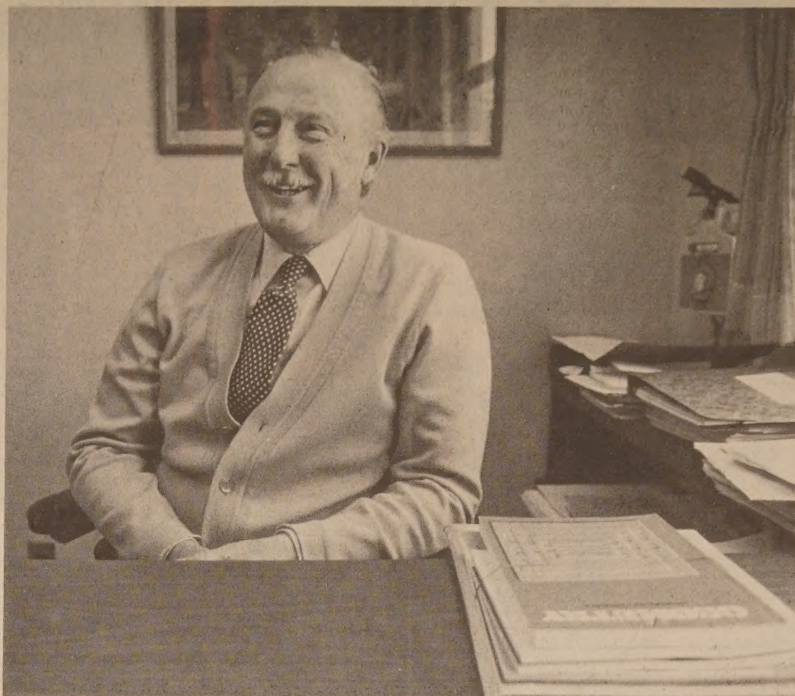

Assistant Superintendent Richard Rosenquist said in view of the next day that the real issue running through the discussion was the autonomy of the school site versus board control over the plans.

He said that according to state guidelines, the councils submit their plans to the state without prior board approval, but the councils do have certain prerogatives in the plan design.

Thomsen said the plan was "very sticky and very complicated," he said, "because of dealing with state laws, site council rules and board rules all at once."

Thomsen said the board decided it would lay out specific standards and disapproval of future plans, in order to prevent the danger of arbitrary decisions.

After action the board approved: approximately $8,600 pre-school incentive grant for education that will provide a speech therapist at Children's Center, the Parent Nursery and the Albany City Pre-School for the second year in a row;

• a preliminary consolidated application to the state for program funding;

• an unpaid leave of absence for Beverly Underwood, special education instructional aid at Cornell School from March 19 through June 18;

• summer employment at Albany Adult School for teachers Timothy Beard, Rosalee Cassell, Dobie Doyle, Elizabeth Evans, Lisbeth Hubbard and Joseph Mueller;

• an Albany High School overnight field trip for approximately 14 students on the wrestling team to participate in the Northview High School Wrestling Tournament in Covina, California, Dec. 16-20, 1982;

• the payment of $1,665.74 in dues for membership in the California School Boards Association during the 1982-83 school year.

Two items were submitted to the school board: a commendation to the school district from the Red Cross "for service performed in support of disaster relief" during the winter floods when the district facilities were used as a disaster relief center; and district enrollment figures.

The board tabled until the next meeting action on programs for gifted and talented students, board policies, mandated work requirements for public assistance grants and acceptance of gifts.

Endorses Gerti Thomas

It gives me great pleasure to heartily endorse Gerti B. Thomas for the office of Assemblywoman of the 12th Assembly District.

I know her well and can attest to her high principles and concern for the welfare of all people. Without a doubt she is a great humanitarian and a tireless worker who comes to doing for others. I have seen her in action and also has an intense dislike for wasteful spending. She has received many awards for outstanding service to her community, is very active in the Republican party, and is the 12th edition of Who's Who of American and in the sixth edition of the World Who's Who.

I would work for less spending at the state level and bring common-sense policies to fruition in Sacramento. We would all benefit if she is elected. Please vote for G. B. Thomas on June 8, 1982.

Thank you.
Very truly yours,
Agnes M. Hoogen

He supports Jackson

As citizens we are central to our system of democratic government. As citizens we pick our representatives and hold them accountable. But for this system to work we all should participate. Yet I can understand why many people decide not to vote in local elections because they know little about the candidates or the issues.

I've been a candidate, nothing has distressed me more than to win with a small voter turnout. That's why I'm writing to you about the credentials of Booker T. Jackson, Jr., who is seeking election on June 8 to the open seat vacated by retiring Judge Mario Barsotti of the Berkeley Municipal Court.

Booker Jackson and I have served together for three years as trustees of the Peralta Community Colleges. I have learned much from him and I've admired deeply his values and skills. When I think of Booker as a judge, three things I know to be true about him: He is a man of integrity. He is a lawyer with experience in civil and criminal law. He is a good lawyer and has served his clients well.

More important to me, however, is his respect for the law. He is as devoted to the law and what it means to a democratic society as anyone I know.

He faces and deals with the issues. Never once have I seen him tempted into demagoguery or personalities. Nor did he ever lose his faith in the ultimate wisdom of the people even when passions of the moment seem overwhelming. His calm and sense of fairness will serve us well in his judicial role.

He believes as passionately in our system of citizen self-governance as I do. He wants to preserve and strengthen this historically rare form of government. This requires constant vigilance. Time and again he showed this capacity at Peralta. Its present strength in the face of devastating financial pressures attests to Booker's contributions.

Sincerely,
Curt Aller

ELECTION '82 / Alameda County Superior Court

Campaign of opposites in county court race

Meloling vs. Ramsey: a fierce battle

HAROLD KRUGER

Albert "Bud" Meloling is mad as hell, and he's not going to take it anymore.

Meloling is mad about crime, and he's mad about the bad guys always getting a slap on the wrist. But most of all, he's mad about Henry Ramsey. Actually, maybe "mad" is too gentle a word.

Ramsey is a little unhappy, too. He thought he was doing a good job as a Superior Court judge until Meloling came along and started pointing a very sharp finger in his direction.

Who's right? Meloling, an assistant district attorney, is used to prosecuting people. Ramsey, a former defense lawyer, is used to defending them. On June 8, the electorate will be the judge.

While candidates in the other Superior Court contest campaign in blissful anonymity, Meloling and Ramsey have been going at each other in one of the fiercest judicial races in recent Alameda County history — a race that may go a long way toward deciding what kind of judiciary this county and Contra Costa County will have in coming years.

White prosecutor vs. black judge. Conservative vs. liberal. Outsider vs. the establishment. Southern Alameda County vs. northern Alameda County. In an era when most politicians so homogenize their views and personalities they soon become indistinguishable from one another, this race is stunning in its simplicity.

Ramsey, 48, and a former Berkeley City Council member from 1973-77, says when he was appointed to the bench by Governor Brown in 1980 he never dreamed he'd actually have to run hard — if at all — for re-election. After a few weeks on the Berkeley council, he vowed never to run for election again.

"I never wanted to be an officeholder," he says. "I thought when I first came here I'd just do the work. I'd be diligent, fair, make the just decisions and serve until I either retired or was elevated to another bench. But, bang, the first shot out was me."

Meloling says he decided to challenge Ramsey only after long deliberations, but he may have had his sights set on the new judge from the day he was chosen by the governor.

"I knew when he was first appointed he would be trouble," says Meloling, 55. "He was a defense lawyer and a member of the faculty at UC."

Ramsey taught at Boalt Hall during the 1970s.

Despite his expressed aversion to political hoopla, Ramsey says he runs now because he's "got no choice." The Meloling challenge is so compelling and, according to Ramsey, so frightening, it must be met. A Meloling victory, he says, "would be a sad day and a lot of judges would tuck their tails between their legs." Ramsey's endorsements seem to bear him out as state Supreme Court justices on down have given him the nod over his opponent.

But Meloling sees the problem from a different perspective. He seems to worry neither for the niceties of the judges' fraternity, nor for their lack of public backing. Single-mindedly and passionately, Meloling frets only about crime in the streets.

"There's a real serious goddamn crime problem," he says. "Many people live with bars on their windows. The people are not being cared for."

What goes on in the courts is a crime, says Meloling, as the guilty get off or are coddled.

"The system collapsed a long time ago," he says. "We're treading water."

How he will set the system right where Ramsey hasn't is unclear. Meloling says convicted criminals should serve "full sentences," and he's determined to give them just that. But what is it? A full sentence "truly reflects the gravity of the crime," he says.

Ramsey is "very lenient, very defendant-oriented, not too concerned about the public safety," according to Meloling, who has cited case after case of what he sees as Ramsey's soft treatment of the accused and the guilty. None of the cases Meloling cites will ever be remembered as judicial landmarks, but to Meloling they show a judge who is too preoccupied with the rights of the defendants and isn't "objective" toward the prosecution.

"The role of the judiciary is to make sure the state and other powerful institutions stay within legal constraints," says Ramsey, who is portrayed in his campaign literature as having "an almost religious belief" in the law. "If the people abandon that, they've given up a lot. He'll abandon the rule of law for the short-term goal of getting criminals."

To that, Meloling says, "I've been in this business for 30 years. I've never been accused of depriving anyone of their rights."

With Meloling casting himself as so tough and uncompromising, says Ramsey, he is sure to create problems for the cases he tries.

"Mr. Meloling could cost this county a lot of money. If Mr. Meloling becomes the judge he promises to be, he'd just be reversed consistently," says Ramsey. "What happens is it's difficult to get convictions the second time around. It's much better if the judge is careful and takes seriously the rights of the individuals. People don't think about that."

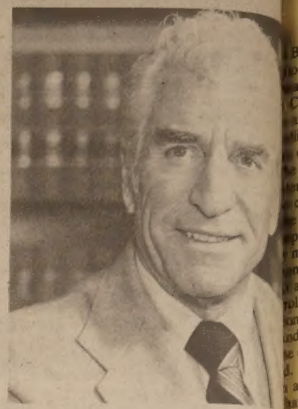

Meloling isn't worried about what appellate courts may do to the cases he handles. As for Ramsey, "His cases will never be reversed because you can never reverse acquittals," Meloling says.

Unlike judicial campaigns of the past when candidates would run on their experience and speak of the judicial system in abstractions, Meloling has made Ramsey the issue, questioning his judgment on specific cases — something virtually unheard of 10 years ago. Ramsey, in turn, has been trying to fight back.

"I have been a good judge," he says. "I've been stern when sternness is called for. I have not been lazy or temperate. I work hard. Mr. Meloling's candidacy has been strident and is not factual. It's been misleading and unethical. The people should reject those tactics."

The Ramsey camp, and the candidate himself, now even hint the Meloling campaign is tainted by racism — a charge that may be Ramsey's fleeting attempt to wound his onrushing challenger.

Specifically, Ramsey points to a flier Meloling is distributing in "selected" portions of Alameda County that is simply a reprint of a Feb. 11 San Francisco Chronicle story announcing Meloling's candidacy. The Meloling campaign literature runs the story in full along with the mug shots side-by-side of the two men. On top of the Meloling slogan, "Compare the candidates," the sentence "There is a difference" is in large letters.

"I find it unusual that he would display a racist slogan," Ramsey says. "People have a right to be doing that. There's one obvious answer, he's a racist."

Meloling says the literature was passed out by a volunteer. The racism charge is nothing new. "I've heard it from all those bastards, and it makes me angry," Meloling, who considers politics a "dirty business."

(One of Meloling's biggest cases was a first-degree murder conviction of Darin Lee, a white woman who killed a 5-year-old black child because he was black.)

He is also upset when critics say he is too lenient on the bench. "I don't deal in fantasy. I deal in fact. I don't deal in fantasy," Meloling says.

It should be noted Meloling's own personal mentions "at age 15, too young to join the country's defense, he went to Canada, lived and enlisted as a tailgunner in the Royal Canadian Air Force."

Tailgunner Bud vs. Humane Henry. Ramsey says he will keep his job; Meloling wants to take it. The important for Ramsey to lose. "People are blood in the struggle so people of color and on the Supreme Court and in the Assembly and mayor's office," he says.

It's too important for Meloling to lose. In a one-man war on crime.

"Well, now you've got enough information to lambaste the s--- out of me," he says.

Correction

The Times Journal of May 19 reported that the Albany Planning Commission had ordered Michael's Liquors to remove its non-conforming rooftop sign based on an earlier, precedent-setting commission decision.

That earlier decision was not a precedent. It did result in Jay Vee Liquors having to remove its rooftop sign, according to City Planner Richard Pearson, but the decision was reached at the planning department level, not by the commission.

Homemade wine may win at state fair

There are just two more months to put the finishing touches on your homemade wines for competition in the 1982 Alameda County Fair.

On opening day, Saturday, June 26, a panel of judges will search for the best of the homemade wines. Last year, amateur winemakers from the Bay Area submitted samples of over 40 different wines ranging in type from fruit wines and mead to the drier table wines.

The categories of wines to be judged are Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel, Pinot Noir (late harvest), Petite Sirah, Chardonnay, Chenin Blanc, Johannisberg Riesling, Sauvignon Blanc, Semillon, blended whites and reds, berry wines, apple wines, other fruit wines and entries will be judged for color, aroma, taste and quality.

Exhibitors wishing entry forms for the wine-making competition or any of the other categories of fine arts and photography to home art and craft arranging can obtain them for $1 at the fair, Pleasanton Ave., Pleasanton, CA 94566.

Completed entry forms must be received by June 1, 1982. For further information, call Karen Sweet at 846-2881.

New telephone computer to save millions

Stereo-sized machine cost $5.5 million

By ROSANNE PAGANO

ALBANY — The miles of wire are quiet now. The floor to ceiling shelves they are housed in are marked for scrap. Once the heart of the Pacific Telephone Co.'s local call-switching system, the roomful of wires was recently replaced with a stereo-sized computer that officials say will save the utility millions of dollars in salaries and energy costs.

The new computer, called ESS, for electronic switching system, processes Albany's incoming and outgoing telephone calls and keeps track of them for billing. The computer needs only one technician to baby-sit it compared to 15 workers on the old system — as it manages 40,000 calls per hour in the basement of the company's Solano Avenue office.

At about $30,000 per year per technician, the saving alone makes the new system very attractive, said the company's Carl Anderson.

Anderson, responsible for local electronic switching, said displaced workers have all been reassigned or retrained.

In addition to saving manpower, the compact computer handles the same call load as the older equipment, but eight times faster.

Officials are sold on the computer's swiftness plus its ability to adapt as the need for local telephone service grows.

Anderson says that 200 new telephone numbers are being added in the Albany, Berkeley and El Cerrito area each month. At that rate, the amount of numbers in-use should reach the 40,000 mark — up from 33,000 currently.

The phone company also expects to trim its PG&E electric bill by converting to ESS. Anderson says many of the new computer's components use only five volts of direct current, while the older equipment took a full 48 volts to do the same job.

About 30 local business and government leaders were on hand recently to see the new switching technique.

The group, which included newly-seated Albany Mayor Ruth Ganong and Berkeley City Council members Shirley Dean and Leo Bach, seemed interested in the new system, but asked few questions of tour guides.

Ganong, trying to assess the system's impact on local jobs, said she is "concerned" about workers displaced by automation, but was satisfied that the company is doing what it can to help solve the problem.

The six-month old computer was paid for out of Pacific Telephone's capital improvement fund, a portion of money set aside from yearly profits to help modernize equipment.

Last year, the phone company spent $1.8 billion on capital improvements statewide.

It is too early to predict just how much the utility might save with ESS, but the result will not be lower telephone bills for local customers.

The rate for telephone service is set by the state Public Utility Commission. The company cannot lower — or raise — its rates without first appearing before the PUC.

Instead, the computer's costs will be shared among telephone users throughout the state, officials say.

Later, at a company-sponsored luncheon, general manager Charles McAvoy called on local leaders to help the utility fight legislation that would restructure the company.

Describing how the federal government's recent anti-trust ruling will affect local rate-payers, McAvoy warned the group that legislation now before Congress could undermine the ruling — resulting in higher phone bills later — unless voters band together to kill the measure.

The bill, (HR 5158 introduced by Timothy Wirth, D-Colo.) would eventually take the phone company out of the business of producing equipment to transmit telephone calls, McAvoy said.

"You might not be able to buy a telephone from the telephone company," he said.

Cops nab rape suspect

Police find and arrest the man responsible for the rapes. He said of the incident in light of the controversy over the rapes and the fact that they were not prosecuted in the area.

Police got a crack force out there and proceeded with good police work," he said. "There was a follow-up on the investigation and it proceeded in a cool, methodical effort from the initial investigation. We didn't let UC (campus police) influence our efforts or create any problems."

According to Boyd, public outrage cannot determine police methods.

"In cases like this, the public demands an arrest — we have to make sure we arrest the correct person, however," he said. "We have to test a person's innocence. This was a fruitful, routine investigation and we are confident that we have enough evidence that points to Mr. Jones in this case. Judge Brosnahan also felt there was enough evidence and she recognized the severity of the charges in imposing a $250,000 bail," he said.

Police said that in both the rape cases the victims were women who were at home with minor children. Given this method of operation, police believed it was the same person who was responsible for both rapes.

The first rape took place on April 19 and the second on April 30. On May 6 there was a report of a prowler in the Village. A description of the prowler matched Jones.

Police also explained that the case would not have developed as it had were it not for the extremely close cooperation of one of the victims. The other victim refused to involve herself in the case.

Boyd credited the cooperative victim for the police success.

"She has given so freely of her time and has done everything and more we could have asked for in successfully resolving this case," Boyd said.

Pot luck with Olga Bier

It was really there all the time

My old friend Bob once said to me with a twinkle in his eyes, "I just knew there was a table under there." He was referring to the mountain of fabric in the middle of our dining room. We had been working on costumes for a production for many months. That night I finally managed to finish the last pirate's outfit and we actually had been able to eat on the dining room table.

Well, last night I just knew I had a desk under that stack of papers, letters, and books. And so there was! It's just that in re-discovering the desk top, I also uncovered lots of mail that needed attending to. So here goes.

Patricia T. writes:

We are enthusiastic about using our steamer to cook vegetables, so it has occurred to us that other foods could be steamed also...I haven't been able to locate a cookbook on the subject. Any suggestions?

Dear Patricia,

During the Gourmet Products show I wrote about recently, I met and talked to many authors and publishers. Owlwood Productions, Inc. (1355 Market St., SF 94103) has exactly the book you want. It's an inexpensive ($2.95) paperback called "Steam Cooking Now!" by Barbara Swift Brauer.

It's an easy-to-read little book that gives marvelous hints and recipes for cooking with steam. It begins by describing steamers of every price and size — and even how to improvise one. Steaming correctly, of course, preserves nutrients, color, and flavor. To say nothing of saving energy.

We're all familiar with steaming vegetables, but how about macaroni and cheese or chicken or fish with seasoned dressing? Zucchini-Carrot Bread or Banana Nut Bran Muffins can be steamed too. How does this sound?

Fresh Pears in Amaretto

4 ripe fresh pears, cored and peeled
8 T. Amaretto liqueur

1 oz. semi-sweet chocolate shaved into curls or coarsely grated

Place prepared pears upright in a heatproof dish that will sit inside a steamer (or pot with rack). Steam 5 minutes and baste with liqueur. Steam an additional 5 minutes or until tender. Remove to individual serving dishes and spoon liqueur over each. Garnish with chocolate curls and serve at once.

When steaming, do remember to have a sufficient amount of water in the bottom pot so you can steam for the required time without worrying that the water will boil away.

If you can't find this handy little book, write the publisher. It should start you out on all kinds of steaming adventures.

Cheers, Olga B.

We goofed

Mary M. and Mrs. CEP write with the same comments re "Betty Carlson's Burgundy Beef." Apparently they had very bad luck with what I described as a delicious and attractive dish from the Beef Cook-Off. Theirs turned out as a "gooey mess."

So I called Betty in Morgan Hill and said, "I saw you make it and I tasted it and loved it. Was the recipe correct?"

We decided the amount of flour (1 c.) was far too much as written.

Then, another call from Ruth K. who is a faithful reader and a great cook. She supported my original raves but reported she used only 1/4 c. of flour. So I took to the stove and followed her amendment. I cooked it in my electric skillet and it was indeed the delicious dish I had originally tasted. The combination of wine, bouillon, and the brown sugar and Worcestershire is really very tasty. So if you haven't tried it yet, change the amount of flour to 1/4 c. and try again. And thanks for your prompt reactions!

Sue S. asks:

My mother made what she called "Chow Chow." Can you find me a recipe?

Dear Sue,

This is an old (originally Chinese) relish of mixed vegetables, pickled and strongly flavored with mustard. Here's one to try. Hope it's as good as Mom's!

Chow Chow (10 cups)

Chop:
2 qts. green tomatoes
1 qt. white onions
1 large head green cabbage
1 large stalk of celery
6 sweet red peppers

Mix with:
1 T. celery seeds
2 c. salt
4 qts. water

Let sit in enameled pot or glass bowl overnight. Do not use an aluminum container. Next day, bring all to a boil and then drain.

Mix together thoroughly and bring to a boil:

1 c. flour
4 T. dry mustard
2 c. sugar
2 t. ground turmeric
2 qts. vinegar

Stir until the mixture thickens and then add the drained vegetables and boil all together 5 minutes. Cool and bottle in sterilized jars.

You could add chopped cucumbers and cauliflower to the vegetable mixture if you like. Also some cloves. This a great old-fashioned relish.

Still more questions

Space has run out and there are many more questions. Those of you who ask for specific recipes may answer from me, but please hang in there. I'm busy looking.

Delivers the taste of cigarettes with up to twice the tar.

—Landmark Smoker Study

Extensive research proves 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT consistently matches the taste of leading higher tar brands.

Latest research offers the most conclusive evidence yet confirming MERIT as the proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

MERIT Taste Does It!

In impartial tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Debate Ends.

In a second part of the same study, smokers confirm that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Willie Wong and Frances Spencer

'The world's only Chinese & Jewish mime comedy act'

ALBANY — Willie Wong and Frances Spencer bill themselves as "the only Chinese and Jewish mime and comedy act in the world."

At different times, they've also called themselves by their ethnic names, SuChin and Faygela, but most often go by Won Ton and Bagel.

Spencer, an Albany resident, says she and her partner are next scheduled to appear at the Live Oak Park Theater, corner of Shattuck at Berryman in Berkeley, on the weekend of June 26-27 at 8 p.m. (Tickets at $3.50 will be sold at the door, or call 843-1530 for reservations.) Rounding out their ensemble are pianist Bob Greenberg and actor and stage manager Jim Parsons.

Spencer says the duo started performing street mime about five years ago all over the Bay Area, including local stints at the Solano Stroll in Albany and the Thousand Oaks district of north Berkeley and at Berkeley's College Avenue Fair.

"Our act has evolved into theatre pieces combining classic mime complete with robots, comedy sketches, musical numbers and character studies, in the spirit of Chinese opera, Yiddish theater, Commedia del Arte and vaudeville," she said.

Spencer is co-author of material for their act, an experience which led to her writing six original plays, three of them musicals. Excerpts from one musical, "The New Secretary," were presented in a UC-Berkeley Drama Department production of scenes by women playwrights, in a KPFA radio series on the labor movement and at the National Secretary's Day rally in San Francisco.

"Several other plays, including a musical called 'The Nursing Home,' are burning a hole into the shelf waiting for a producer," Spencer said.

She also writes science fiction and has had one story published in Pandora magazine and another in the works.

Wong, an Oakland resident, has performed at the California College of Arts and Crafts and was a member of the company at the Circle Star Theater in San Carlos, where he toured with "Teahouse of the August Moon." He is also a watercolor artist whose work is in galleries in Monterey and Los Angeles.

THOUSAND OAKS — Chiropractor Dr. Joan Hangarter has opened an office here in north Berkeley.

Solano Chiropractic offices are located at 1738 Solano Ave. They open June 1. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"I work with headaches, blood sugar problems, neck and back pain," she said.

Hangarter has been a chiropractor for two years; she also has a master's degree in counseling.

Hangarter's practice includes chiropractic care, nutritional counseling and sports medicine.

"I love the process of getting people well. Inspiring them to become as healthy as they can. I see a doctor as being a teacher — and that's what I am."

CC County kids learn nutrition

Educators teach eating right, growing food

By TERRY TOCZYNSKI

Contra Costa County and the University of California are working together to see that young people in the area learn how to stay healthy by eating right.

Nutrition educators visit children and teen-agers at their schools and clubs to teach them the basics of good nutrition and how to grow their own food.

The various programs are funded under the University of California Cooperative Extension Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program of Contra Costa County and the county 4-H Club.

Melinda Manjarrez, a nutrition educator with EFNEP, and Michael Ashlock, a youth gardening instructor with the 4-H Club, are two of the county's imaginative nutrition workers.

This year, Manjarrez will present the first of what she hopes will become an annual Fun Food Fair in Richmond.

The fair will be held on June 5 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Nevin Community Center on Nevin Avenue in Richmond.

Manjarrez, 32, said that the purpose of the food fair is to bring an awareness of nutrition to residents of West Contra Costa County.

"It's hard to push nutrition," Manjarrez said. "People just don't care very much. But it's very important."

Twenty-eight non-profit agencies — including schools, clubs and service organizations — will participate in Saturday's nutrition awareness fair. Manjarrez said the fair is an attempt to show that nutrition education can be fun.

She said that the organizations will provide entertainment and information booths, food, clowns, and posters made by children in the school nutrition classes.

The Fun Food Fair is an outgrowth of the nutrition program in which Manjarrez has been involved for the last four years.

Manjarrez said that her travelling educational presentations are geared primarily to low-income and minority families.

A native of Panama with a B.A. in Spanish literature from Cal State Hayward, Manjarrez said she likes to make sure she reaches the Spanish-speaking population.

She is now working on her master's degree in special education at Hayward.

Throughout the school year, Manjarrez in West County and her colleague, Mary Emmerick, in the east, visit several schools each month from pre-school through high school.

The classes have been given all over the county, including El Cerrito, and have even ventured into Berkeley with a presentation at Jefferson School.

For the younger children the health conscious teachers put on nutrition puppet shows and play health games in order to teach the basic nutrients, vitamins and food groups in an entertaining way.

"The classes are activity-oriented," Manjarrez said. "There are usually four sessions in which the children paint posters and murals, play games and watch films on nutrition."

If space, time or the age of the students makes such a presentation impractical, Manjarrez said, the teachers speak at a school assembly.

Thirty-three-year-old Michael Ashlock, who used to teach gardening skills to disabled adults through CETA, has been conducting his youth gardening program for a year and a half. He said that he tailors the programs to suit the students and facilities at each school or club.

At some schools, Ashlock said, the youngsters create their gardens in planter boxes while at other schools there is a vacant plot of land just begging to be productive.

Also, some of the teen-agers and pre-teens participate in the gardening program through the community 4-H plan, he said. Through that plan one person makes his or her backyard available and the young people plant and tend the garden there, under the supervision of one of the parents.

As the children weed the Ashlock said, he teaches the children such basic botanical concepts as seed sprouting and why plants turn towards the sun, and he has them do experiments with the soil.

Ashlock is working with 30 schools and clubs this year.

Robert Hedley

EL CERRITO — Funeral services will be held this week for Robert Charles Hedley, a resident of El Cerrito for 41 years.

Mr. Hedley, a native of Seattle, Washington, was 74 years old.

He is survived by his wife of 44 years, Gertrude; daughters Patricia Thomson of Santa Rosa and Roberta Cockrell of Brentwood; two grandchildren, Robert and Denise Thomson; a sister, Lois Barnes of Mesa, Arizona; and five nieces and four nephews.

Mr. Hedley worked in the Naval Shipyards at Alameda Island and Hunters Point during World War II, then went to work for the Pacific Telephone Company, where he was employed almost 29 years.

He was a member of the Lutheran Church for 40 years, holding several offices including Sunday school treasurer for 30 years. He also sang in the church choir.

A memorial service will be held at Grace Lutheran Church, 15 Santa Fe Ave., El Cerrito, on Sunday, June 6, at 2:30 p.m. Officers for the service will be three pastors who have served this congregation: O.R. Janke, Ronald Kentner and Robert A. Light.

The family requests no flowers. Memorials may be made to Grace Lutheran Church Memorial Fund, Heart Fund or the Kidney Foundation.

Narcisse Bergeron

EL CERRITO — A requiem mass will be held for Narcisse C. "Nars" Bergeron, 74, of noted restaurant Victor J. "Trader" Bergeron, at the Golden Mortuary on June 26.

A native of San Francisco and longtime resident of Berkeley, Mr. Bergeron died June 2 in a Berkeley hospital. He was 84.

He was self-employed as owner of the Pilgrim Manufacturing Co. and a member of Richmond No. 1251, BPOE, and the Richmond Yacht Club.

He is survived by his wife, Hilda; two daughters, Elaine Christophe, of San Jose, and June Warren, of Hillsboro; a sister, Marie Taylor, of El Cerrito; 14 grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

A mass was offered at St. Bernard Catholic Church, 1500 St. Joseph's Ave., on June 2.

The family prefers memorial services to be in the form of donations to the A.L.S. Association, c/o Presbyterian Hospital, 2033 Buchanan St., San Francisco, or the American Heart Association, 1440 Crocker-Hart Rd., San Francisco, or the Boys' Center, P.O. Box 95476, Sonoma 95476.

He was a building contractor and a member of the El Cerrito United Methodist Church.

Arrangements were handled by Sunset View Mortuary, with interment at Sunset View Cemetery.

Murphy's law snags suspect

EL CERRITO — Police are still tallying the errors made by a would-be bank robber now in custody.

Authorities said first mistake Billy E. Alderson, 24, of 1342 Everett St., made, was to demand the money from a teller at Twin Pines Savings and Loan on 11481 San Pablo Ave., about 9 a.m. May 24.

The second mistake he made was to threaten the clerk with a make-believe pistol, probably nothing more than his hand in his pocket. And the third mistake he made was to accept the money.

The packet of cash was actually a security pack kept by the bank for just such occasions. After Alderson fled to his waiting green VW station wagon the packet exploded with tear-gas and red dye, making a mess of both the suspect and his car.

The suspect panicked and fled on foot, but left the auto behind.

Within minutes police got a call from Alderson (his fourth mistake), reporting the car stolen from 1342 Everett St., (his address, and his fifth mistake.)

Police went to the Everett address, noted Alderson matched the appearance of the bandit, and took him in custody.

Picnickers plan rally

Judge refuses to halt voter probe

bilingual ballots are available only those languages. The probe, they said, would create a "chilling effect" on minority voter registration. Early this month, the critics of the investigation, including six of the Richmond residents involved in the case, sought an injunction to end the investigation. Williams rejected their request, saying he had no jurisdiction over the investigation. He said, however, that the ACLU and other plaintiffs would still be entitled to claim damages in the future. Local Hispanic leaders today expressed dismay at the court ruling. "If people did illegally register to vote, it wasn't a matter of fraud," said Jim Caudillo, chairman of the Hispanic Coalition for Human Rights, formed last month in Richmond to protest the investigation. "It's a matter of education, not fraud. They need to be taught when they are entitled to vote." Caudillo said any investigation into election rolls should be conducted by the state not a federal district attorney. "If there's fraud in the election, it's a state matter," Caudillo said. "If an investigation has to be done it should be done by the secretary of state who oversees the election process."

The smell of yeast

By RUTH GUTHARTZ

was a bread baker who learned his trade in the country. He was proud of the baked goods he produced, tasty, with just enough golden crust on the outside, tender and springy inside. He knew how to mix, eggs shortening, yeast and other ingredients in copper bowls. He mixed and kneaded the dough to texture and elasticity, then let it rest while the yeast did their work. He needed no clock to tell him when it was time to punch down the risen dough, to knead with the heel of his hand before he threw it onto a wooden board for a final kneading. Then he shaped the dough into loaves. He knew without a thermometer, by the feel of the dough, when it was ready to be baked. The loaves were ready to be taken from the oven with long-handled spatulas. Papa was proud that he baked bread rolls from start to finish. He was not one of those bakers who could do only one step of the process. Papa was a small, slender man who, for most of his life, wore a thick, bristly brown mustache. After his death and uneasily bestowed kisses, I rubbed gently on my cheeks the soreness the bristles left on my cheek. I often wished my father could be like my Uncle Frank, his youngest brother. Uncle Frank joked, told me and drove his latest Buick at reckless speeds. His parties and departures were accompanied by fond hugs. When he was a baker too, he preferred talking to his customers.

Papa was not a demonstrative man; he was not given to embraces, kisses or verbal endearments. In fact he was not much of a talker. Especially in English, an alien tongue to him, he spoke briefly. With his brothers, speaking Yiddish, German, Hungarian, he was a bit more generous with words.

quiet man. Papa liked quiet in the house, especially at night. My sisters and I knew that dinner-time was time for bickering. We kept our conversation light and lively. At least once every evening, Papa would come when I swallowed my milk with a gulp that I could barely hold. His stern look, issuing from deep-set eyes, half-hidden by bushy eyebrows, effectively ended the meal.

look stirred memories of Papa's rare but vivid temper. Not only were my sisters and I afraid, but I was in awe of the energy and passion that was not always apparent.

was the afternoon, for example, when my older sister, Helen and Etta, and their teen-age friends had come to the rug to dance to records. From the nearby kitchen where he napped, Papa bellowed several times for them to be quiet. Each time, after a few seconds of giggling, the partying resumed as loudly as before. Papa stormed out in his long white BVD's, the underwear that looked like oversized Doctor Denton's. Picking up the nearest chair, he hurled it through the French doors. Glass cracked; shattered pieces splattered about the floor. The fractured chair arms and legs flew through the air. Motionless, we stood as though we had been playing a game and the leader had yelled, "Freeze." My sisters' cheeks flushed in fright and embarrassment; tears brimmed at Helen's eyelids. Their friends quietly retreated out the front door. As my sisters and I swept up the broken chair and shards of glass, we could hear Papa's snoring, peaceful at last. We muttered in indignation, murmured "mean," "unfair," but did not allow ourselves even to think beyond such mild complaints.

"Something was missing; something that should have been there, to make this man the Papa I remembered, was not present."

Papa's afternoon naps, and his night-time work, were the axis around which our activities centered. Early in my life, when Mama and Papa operated a bakery-restaurant, Papa was in charge of the bake shop below the restaurant. In that huge, hot cavern with dark corners, Papa and the other bakers worked from midnight to noon. Papa supervised bakers who made Danish pastries, baked and decorated layer cakes. They made whipped-cream chocolate coated eclairs, napoleons, magnificently tall charlotte ruses, and my very favorite chocolate seven-layer cakes. But Papa, along with a helper, made the breads and rolls himself.

All this changed with the Depression of the late 1920s. It was more than a remote economic and political event; small neighborhood businesses everywhere shut down and did not reopen. My parents declared bankruptcy and closed the bakery-restaurant at 125th Street and 3rd Avenue. We moved to the Bronx and rented an apartment. In his early fifties by then, Papa began to look for work as a baker, the source of his greatest pride. Large corporate bakeries like Wonder Bread Company supplanted neighborhood bakeries to produce packaged baked goods. They hired assembly-line workers, who, all day long, repeated over and over only one step in the automated process of making a loaf of bread. Neither Papa nor Wonder Bread could, would, accommodate to the other. Papa railed at the times, at big business. Never a patient man, he scolded us even more for our noisiness; he required meals to be served punctually and smiled even less than before. He made fewer and fewer attempts to seek employment. But economic necessity bent his already wounded pride. Papa gloomily accepted the indignity of working for his youngest brother, my rascal-like Uncle Frank.

Six days a week he left the house at two in the morning for Uncle Frank's bakery-restaurant. He carried a bag which held the sandwich and coffee-filled thermos Mama had prepared.

Each day at two in the afternoon, Papa brought the brown paper sack home, filled with bread, rolls and Danish. Sometimes on Friday, he brought me a miniature challah, my very own Sabbath bread. If I didn't hear him enter quietly, I always knew when Papa had arrived. The slightly sour, ripe odor of yeast announced his presence. He put his bag down and immediately poured a shot glass

Java Restaurant holds big grand opening

ALBANY — Two Berkeley restaurateurs have brought their rystafel, their sate dagging and their sambel goreng babi to Albany — and local politicians and civic leaders lapped it up at a recent open house.

Java Restaurant opened its doors last month at 843 San Pablo Ave. (525-8557). It is open Tuesday to Friday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., and on weekends from 5 to 9 p.m.

The restaurant, which serves 60 and has a room available for private parties, is decorated with small wall hangings, black and white drawings, and several paintings. Java Restaurant was in Berkeley for seven years.

The open house featured the house specialty, rystafel, or rice table, along with beer and wine. The rice table featured rice served with skewered beef (sate dagging), coconut chili pork (sambal goreng babi), lamb curry and chicken curry.

"There are so many curry variations in Indonesian cooking, from mild to spicy," co-owner Shirley Wang explained.

Also on the menu were gado gado, a salad with a spicy peanut sauce, and spring rolls.

The regular dinner menu includes a rotating selection of main courses, such as spicy roast chicken on Fridays and Sundays and beef stew on Thursdays.

The lunch menu offers a $2.95 rice plate as well as hamburgers.

Health professionals open office

Chiropractic-counseling clinic

THOUSAND OAKS — Chiropractor Dr. Joan Hangarter has opened an office here in north Berkeley.

Solano Chiropractic offices are located at 1738 Solano Ave. They open June 1. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Hangarter has been a chiropractor for two years; she also has a master's degree in counseling.

Hangarter's practice includes chiropractic care, nutritional counseling and sports medicine.

"I work with headaches, blood sugar problems, neck and back pain," she said. "This is a time when people are actively seeking health care that gets results. Chiropractic gets results 80 percent of the time."

She says that her business is unique because she enjoys teaching her clients.

"I love the process of getting people well. Inspiring them to become as healthy as they can. I see a doctor as being a teacher — and that's what I am."

Hangarter will be offering free spinal care classes every other Wednesday, from 6-7 p.m. to anyone interested.

Family therapy

ALBANY — Two local therapists, clinical social workers, have opened an office. Ellen Zweben has been in private practice for 15 years. She specializes in working with adults, marital therapy and families.

Her colleague, Diane J. Wagner, worked in outpatient and residential treatment centers, specializing in working with children and adolescent families.

Their office, which includes a consulting playroom for play therapy, is located at 1225 Albany. Hours are by appointment. Call 524-5217.

Mr. President

Dave LaBarre, president of El Cerrito's Camperland, has been elected 1982-83 president of the East Bay RV Dealers Association. LaBarre, 39, was the association's show chairman for 1982 RV/Offroad-Camping Show at the Oakland Coliseum.

Marine in war games

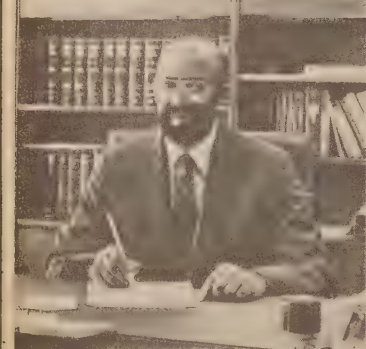

ALBANY — U.S. Marine Pfc. Craig S. Cortez, son of Gilbert and Janice Cortez of Albany, recently participated in exercise "Team Spirit 82" in the Republic of Korea.

He is a member of 3rd Battalion, 4th Marines, on Okinawa.

The exercise involved more than 160,000 personnel and 31 U.S. 7th Fleet ships in a month-long exercise.

Cortez joined the Marine Corps in February 1981.

of cognac for himself. I marvelled at the way he put the glass to his lips, threw his head back and swallowed the golden liquor, all in one swift movement. Then he removed his coat or jacket, washed and had his lunch. Not even once did that meal deviate. A bowl of cottage cheese and sour cream awaited him on the table, along with some of his own rye bread and butter. Lunch ended with coffee and more bread and butter. And then the house sank into soundlessness.

Shortly before dinner time, Papa would awaken, take a bath, shave and dress in the fresh clothes — everything from a clean white handkerchief to polished shoes — which Mama had laid out for him.

And before we sat down to dinner, Papa and I examined his long, slender fingers for splinters. With a clean, fine needle and a pair of tweezers, I removed the splinters of coarse, sharp twine which had become embedded as he pulled at the dumbwaiter ropes, sending breads and rolls up from the bakeshop. Papa allowed me to hold his hand until I had carefully, and as painlessly as possible, removed the last speck. Then, with a nod of his head — his "Thank you" — the ritual was completed. A brief rite, it allowed a small closeness between us. Evenings, after dinner, Papa read his Jewish Morning Journal from cover to cover. He and Mama might listen, on the radio, to Jack Benny or Major Bowes' Amateur Hour, and the news broadcast. Soon afterwards he went to sleep again, alone, for a few hours.

Papa and Mama lived a muted life whose boundaries took in working, eating, reading the newspaper religiously and sleeping. Their recreation no longer included, as it once had, socializing at the Young Liberty Benevolent Society. They maintained membership in this left-wing Jewish immigrant association only by paying dues. Family socializing was limited to special occasions like weddings and funerals. On Papa's day off — Wednesday — if weather permitted, they took a walk in Amsterdam Avenue Park. Watching the boats on the East River, they sunned themselves and enjoyed a respite from work and children.

Once a year, in the space of 10 days, this existence varied. Each autumn, at the beginning and ending of the High Holidays, Papa had a few days off. He and Mama went for services to the shul at the Yeshiva College on Amsterdam Avenue. Mama dressed up in a tailored navy blue dress, wore her cameo pendant and a hat. Papa looked neat and proper in his navy blue suit, starched white shirt, tie and grey felt hat. For once, he smelled, not of yeast, but of soap and shaving cream.

There was one time, after I had married and moved away from New York, that my father did not smell of yeast and I longed for the rich, mellow scent of fermentation. That was the winter when Mama became ill and I made a hurried trip from Missouri to New York. After a few tense days, the doctors said she would probably be home in a couple of weeks. Papa went back to work; my sisters and I cleaned, shopped and cooked. Papa carried home the bag of rolls and bread as he had done for years, bringing with him the smell of yeast on his floury shoes and trousers. Every evening we went to the hospital with Papa. For over a week, everything looked, smelled almost as usual. Cheerfully, we prepared for Mama's return.

But then, overnight, Mama became feverish and developed pneumonia. In those pre-antibiotic times, our optimism and anticipation vanished like the sun disappearing behind dark clouds. Papa met the finality of her swift death with an anguished "Mein Gott soundlessly."

The day of the funeral, he dressed slowly. He knotted a navy blue tie around the starched fresh white shirt. He wiped his "good" shoes. In his navy blue suit, he moved, unspoken, in a dream from which there was no waking.

Riding home from the cemetery, Papa, Helen and me in the back seat, Etta and Helen conversation about the relatives and friends at the gravesite. They spoke in unfinished sentences scattered like beads from a broken string meant only to fill the silence. I took Papa's hand and searching, recalled the many times I splinters from these fingers. Our hands would make a contact between us. Something that should have been there, to me the Papa I remembered, was not present.

We arrived home to find the apartment people who had brought food. A roasted chicken left on the table; a pot of stuffed cabbage sat on the table; a platter of home-baked pastries, baskets of candy were piled on counters. Someone had covered all the mirrors, as is the Orthodox Jewish custom, ridding ourselves of the cemetery. Papa washed his hands and each of us followed suit, moving our shoes and put on the house slippers wear for the shiva period, the seven days of mourning.

We went to the kitchen for a cup of coffee. Papa put a cup of coffee to his lips and downed it. He covered his face with his hands. That wall, he sobbed, "A man is not a man when he lowered his hands, the tears roll down his cheeks. I rushed to comfort him, put my arms around his shoulders, pressed his head to my breast, and he sobbed. Only in the closeness of that momentary I regain the faint aroma I had missed earlier, the full smell of yeast. It clung to him still, from that day, a previous lifetime.

Opening lead: ♠2

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

When a boxer is knocked out by an uppercut he usually lands flat on his face and is unlikely to know what was done to him for some time. In bridge the uppercut is equally as effective, but the unfortunate victim knows what has happened to him as soon as the blow has been delivered.

East took his diamond ace at trick one and led back the nine. West ruffed with the six. Since he had read the nine as a suit preference signal, West ruffed with the spade. East was in with the ace and had three tricks in.

Now he made a key play and led back a low diamond. He wanted to make sure that his partner did stick in the eight to force dummy to overruff with the jack.

The uppercut had now done its deadly work. East's five of spades had become the setting trick. The king covered the queen and the nine, to leave the 10, to leave that five the master trump.

Four spades would probably have made, but could be beaten if East opened his singleton club and grabbed the first spade ruff to give West a diamond ruff and get in a club ruff of his own.

The only unbeatable contract would be three no-trump with declarer getting five hearts, one diamond and three clubs.

Class set

on working

A free summer course at North Berkeley Senior Center offers an exploration of the meaning of work.

"Work and Life" evaluates past work experiences and discovers new work, involvement, responsibility and meaningful activity after retirement. "Work and Life," a text on loan to participants, is an anthology of literature, biography, art and song published by the National Council on the Aging, Inc.

The discussion group will be led by Helen Marie Brown, who has worked as a librarian, word processor, writer and teacher.

The group will meet on Fridays, from June 18 through Aug. 20, 1-3 p.m., at 1901 Hearst St., Berkeley.

All are welcome. Call 644-6107 for additional information.

Workshop on will, trusts

Minor Schmidth, attorney at law, ordained elder and specialist in the practice of wills and estate planning, will present a workshop on Tuesday, June 8 at 7:30 p.m.

It will be at Calvary Presbyterian Church, 1940 Virginia St., Berkeley. Admission is free.

The Terwilliger Foundation, which recently visited Harding Elementary El Cerrito, teaches children the value of wild animals — where they live, how they live, why they are important. The main feature of the program is letting children handle stuffed animals. Stroking a falcon above is Michael Cain, while classmate James Starkovich decides to think about a beaver before trying. Meanwhile, a mouse Cady who gives it a quick pat. LaShirley Bolton feels it's better to watch. For many children this is the first time they have touched such creatures. Accompanying the animals is naturalist Lisa Heinz who travels to schools in a van brightly decorated with paintings of some of the animals' habitats.
